[Entered at the Postoffice at Alexandria, Virginia, as On Thursday, May 19, at 5:55 p. m., while the weather was calm and the sea smooth, with a deuse fog, the British steamer Celtic, of the White Star line, from Liverpool, came into collision with the British steamer Britannic, of the same line, from New York for Liverpool, striking her on the port side aft and doing considerable damage. The Britannic's boats were lowered and filled with women and children from the cabin and steerage in a very orderly and expeditious manner. It is to their shame that several men forced themselves into the boats also. Meanwhile an examination was made and the damage to the Britannic ascertained, and, it being found that the vessel was not likely to founder, such boats as were within hall were recalled and their occupants received on board. The others had boarded the Celtic. A pad was made and placed over the hole in the Britannic's side, and she was turned about toward New York, having arranged with the Celtic to keep company. The saddest and most deplorable result of the accident is that several steerage passengers who were lounging about aft at the time of the collission were killed and several others injured. Both vessels, accompanied by the steamships Marengo (British) from Swansea for New York, and British Queen (British) from Liverpool for New York, arrived at the bar at one o'clock yesterday morning. The above report is from the purser of the Britannic, who refused any further information. The Celtic's bow was stove in, but otherwise the vessel was not much damaged. The Britannic's compartment is full of water. It was during a dense fog that the collision occurred. The Celtic and several others injured. Both vessels, fog that the collision occurred. The Celtic struck the Britannic bow on, hitting her abaft the mizzen-mast at No. 4 hatch. The her engines and struck the Britannic a glancing blow, when the latter commenced to fill rapidly. The life-boats were immediately launched and the work of transferring the passengers to the Celtic began. All the women and children were first taken into the boats. Several of the male stearage. the boats. Several of the male steerage passengers jumped into the boats as they were leaving the ship's side, otherwise the passengers behaved admirably. Four grown persons and a little girl, all steerage passengers on the Britannic, were killed, and seven or eight persons injured. Two of the latter had their arms and legs broken. The collision occurred about eighty miles from mainland, about off Nantucket. The Britannic was on her course, head-ing about east by north, while the dress B, GAZETTE office.

face and breast being split open through the middle. The scenes that followed are variously described. Mr. E. Storey, of South Boston, a passenger on the Britannic, was seen in New York last night, after he had been brought up with the other passengers, both cabin and steerage, on the mail boat. He said: There was a very dense fog at the time of the collision, and horns were blowing continually. Between 5:30 and 6 p. m. on Thursday we heard the fog horn of another vessel. I went on deck and peered eagerly into the mist. There was a great commotion on our deck. Now ready MOSEY'S WAR REMINISCENCES AND
